INTERNATIONAL WAR CRIMES TRIBUNAL

BRITISH COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

on US and British War Crimes in the Gulf

PUBLIC HEARING

with

RAMSEY CLARK

Former US Attorney General

Sunday December 1st 1991

3 p.m. - 6 p.m.

HALKEVI Kurdish and Turkish Community Centre,
92-100 Stoke Newington Rd., London N 16.

The need for an International War Crimes Tribunal has never been clearer than at this time. Since the call for its formation by former US Attorney General Ramsey Clark, Commissions of Inquiry have been established in many countries, and hearings and other initiatives have taken place in the US, Central America, Europe, Asia and the Middle East. The Tribunal itself will meet in the US in February 1992 to examine the proceedings of the Commissions of Inquiry on the first anniversary of the war.

Exposing the truth of the Gulf war is not only important as a contribution towards ending the genocidal campaign against Iraq, but is also an essential task if the hands of the US, its allies and satellites are to be stayed from committing further acts of aggression throughout the world.

The British Commission of Inquiry calls on all organisations and individuals from the labour and peace movements, students and all other concerned people to contact us to help organise meetings, commission hearings, publicity and other activities during the coming months.
